Bring home the film Indie Express calls “a laugh riot from beginning to end” NEVER SAY MACBETH – now on DVD from Vanguard Cinema.

See the first film to take the four-hundred year old curse of Macbeth head-on. When a science teacher says “Macbeth” backstage, he creates mayhem for a superstitious theatre troupe. Rogue Cinema calls it “awesome, entertaining, funny, and brilliant . . . one of the top two or three indie films in the last three years.” The L.A. Weekly calls it “a sweet satire of our theatre.”

All actors know never to utter the name Macbeth backstage or terrible tragedies will occur. A falling stage weight nearly killed Laurence Olivier. Charlton Heston was burned in the groin, and Alec Baldwin sliced open his costar’s hand. Will you take on the curse?
